Follow the farolitos!

Celebrate the season with Kit Carson Road museums, galleries and businesses

While visiting the Couse-Sharp Historic Site for live music by Charlie Rafferty, check out the future Lunder Research Center being constructed in the former Mission Gallery site next door.

Get your kicks pre-Saint Nick this Saturday (Dec. 21) from 4-6 p.m., along Kit Carson Road's Historic District galleries, museums and businesses. Expect little farolitos and at least two bonfires, but lots of treats and sweets, all free and open to everyone.

To join in on this "last minute Christmas Holiday fun," Rob Nightingale of Wilder Nightingale Fine Art suggests folks park in the free Town Municipal Parking lot at Quesnel and Kit Carson Road and walk up and down to the main events.

Start off at the Couse Foundation/Couse-Sharp Historic Site (better known locally as the "Couse House") at 138 Kit Carson Road, which will be offering cookies and hot spiced cider. Wander around the "construction site" interior and check out the forthcoming Lunder Research Center (opening in 2021), planned for the former, circa 1915 Joseph H. Sharp studio and Mission Gallery. Eanger I. Couse and Sharp were founding members of the Taos Society of Artists, cementing a hundred years of Taos' reputation as an art and culture center of the Southwest.

"Then stroll along the street lit by holiday farolitos," a press release states. "Visit the shops. Bring your family and friends." Here's just a little of what participating merchants, galleries and lodgers are offering.
